

In the Social World at Home and Abroad.

These Are All Actors in the Great Drama of Life. The Performance of Some is Rendered Yet More Attractive by the Brilliant Accessories of the Stage Upon Which They Move, Bright With Beauty and Resonant With Music. In That of Others We Find That the Simplicity of the Stage Cannot in Any Degree Detract from the Greatness of the Actors, But Rather Accentuates It, as Plainest Garments Do Extremest Beauty.

LIFE IN VANITY FAIR.

HOW SOCIAL RICHMOND SPENDS THE DOG-DAYS.

The Gay Set Pretty Well Scattered—Almost All Have Taken Refuge at Mountain Resort or Seashore.

The "Southern Pleasure Seeker" states that a distinguished clergyman of New York, in conducting religious services at one of our watering places some years ago, took occasion to pray for all young persons who were suffering from the effects of unrequited love. Though unusual, it was unquestionably a legitimate object of prayer. We trust that visiting divines at our resorts this season will follow the example of this one. However, the field would be an alluring one, and it might be difficult to know when to draw the line, because the social world presents so many other characters that could not be neglected. The overworked chaperon would have to be remembered, as would also the inveterate match-maker, the would-be batchelor, ensnared by the summer girl, the man of two engagements, the couple that is "married for fun"—these and more would require attention.

Miss Nellie Boykin is the guest of Miss Marie Lewis, Berryville, Va. Mr. Frank Hobson and Mr. Reed spent several days last week with friends in Richmond.

Miss Janie Grigg has returned from Pittsburgh, in which city she visited her aunt, Mrs. Samuel Graham. Miss Nellie Rogers has returned from Leesburg.

Miss Ellen Mercer Cooke has left the White City, and is now visiting in Detroit, Mich., in which city she is the guest of her grandfather, General P. St. George Cooke, U. S. A. She will return to Richmond about the latter part of this week.

Miss Virgie Drewry is visiting Miss Tunstall Hickson, of Lynchburg. Miss Lillian Yarbrough leaves on Friday of this week for a visit to the Misses McInerney, at their villa on the Hudson, New York State. Later Miss Yarbrough will visit the World's Fair.

Misses Bland and Ellen Clarke have returned from a visit to Miss Lewis, Clarke county, Va. Miss Louise Quarles leaves this week for a Western trip, upon which she will visit Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis and other of the large cities.

Mrs. Rufus Yarbrough has left for Chicago. Misses Helen and Lucy Quarles are spending a little time at the Brandon, Black City.

Mr. Lewis Cardozo is quite ill of typhoid fever at his residence, north Fifth. Miss Isabella Higman left on Friday to visit friends in Farmville. Miss Ellen Blair left yesterday for Alleghany Springs.

Miss Alice Henning is visiting friends in Wytheville. General John R. Cooke leaves on Thursday of this week for a visit to Norfolk, in which city she will be the guest of Mrs. R. Page Waller.

Miss Louise Brander has returned to the city. Miss Winnie Davis will some time during the summer visit Mrs. General Fitzhugh Lee at Glasgow. General Lee's summer home is a capacious, old-fashioned Virginia homestead only three miles distant from the Natural Bridge.

Mrs. Joseph H. Allison, Mrs. R. B. Valentine, Mrs. William R. Trigg, Miss Hargwinckel and Mrs. Guillaume are at the White.

The following is taken from the Cape May correspondent's letter in the New York World:

Cape May has long been considered the most popular resort of the wealth and aristocracy which is to be found south of Mason and Dixon's line. The Southerners have never faltered in their devotion to the wide benches and quaint old places hereabout. Many of the handsomest women who come here are from Maryland and Virginia. One of them is Mrs. Ida G. King, a perfect type of the Southern lady. She is a descendant of the Randolphs, and has all the rare grace, gentleness and beauty for which a long line of ancestors have been celebrated. Mrs. King is stopping with friends here for the summer.

Mrs. Sarah Bruce, who left Richmond some months ago for a tour through Scotland and England, is having a most delightful trip, and is enjoying herself thoroughly.

Delsarte teachers give their pupils foot exercises; loose stockings are worn. The toes are kept in hand one at a time, and wrung in the piggy wiggy fashion so amusing to babyhood. The practice is continued until the joints are responsive.

So much for Delsarte expression. It seems that the New York pedagogue people have been taking lessons. Now they are giving treatments advertised to remove bunions and other callosities, and to restore the natural beauty of the feet of civilized society.

It was anticipated that to-day Rev. Dr. Burton would take formal farewell of the people among whom he has ministered with such admirable result for a number of years, and to whom he has so greatly endeared himself. However, owing to the pronounced indisposition of Mrs. Burton, whose arduous efforts in behalf of the Georgia booth of the Bazaar, followed by the strain incident to the removal of her family from Richmond to Louisville, have left her quite prostrated, it is doubtful if it will be possible for Dr. Burton to leave the city this week, and it is not unlikely that his people may have an opportunity to enjoy his eloquence and his presence for another Sunday. No minister has ever lived in Richmond who has, in the same length of time, accomplished greater good, or won more general esteem and regard. The regret at his resignation is universal, and it is certain that his charming wife, who has been a real force in the social life of the church, will be as greatly missed as himself. But what is Richmond's great loss is Louisville's incalculable gain, and while we sorrow for the former, we cannot but congratulate the vestry of St. Andrew's upon their recognition of Dr. Burton's high qualifications in his vocation, the noblest of all vocations. Our earnest good wishes, sympathetic interest, and sincere regard follow him to the new field of labor, and we know, of success and honor.

Mrs. J. W. Fergusson is feeling no ill effects from her accident last week, but Mr. Edgar Fergusson is less fortunate, and has suffered considerable inconvenience and not a little pain from his severe bruise.

Miss Face, of Norfolk, is visiting Miss M. P. Grooms, of east Broad street. Mrs. Isabella Shine is the guest of friends in Charles City, with whom she will remain for some weeks.

Mrs. G. A. Barksdale, 528 east Grace street, president of the Young Ladies' Guild of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal church, is one of a number of ladies of the city who are inaugurating a movement looking to the purchase of a summer home for working girls, where they and others needing it may find country air, comfortable quarters, good food, rest, and recreation for a week or two in the hot season, at prices within the reach of all. The Guild has entered with enthusiasm upon this undertaking, and they count confidently upon the cordial aid and support of all Episcopalians, as well as of others who recognize the crying need for such a home. The home will be open to working girls of good standing, irrespective of Church affiliations. All information regarding the noble enterprise can be secured upon application to Mrs. Barksdale.

Mrs. Henry Christian, president of the Oakwood Memorial Association, leaves for her old home, in Harrison, Va., this coming week. Mrs. Susan G. Reed, of Church Hill, will leave in a few days for Oxford, N. C., where she will visit her nephew, Mr. Wellford Reed, a prominent citizen of that place. Mrs. Reed will be accompanied by her nephews, Masters Stanley and Leslie Reed.

Mrs. Alexander Weddell, together with her daughters, left on yesterday for Greenwood, Albemarle county, where they will get together a pleasant party of friends who will board with them through the summer and early fall. Most of the party who accompanied them last season will be with them this year, and they anticipate an very enjoyable sojourn at "Paradise Cottage," in the picturesque and healthful region so familiar to Virginians.

Mr. J. S. Moore, of east Broad street, is visiting the World's Fair, in company with his daughter, Alice. Miss Marguerite Moran, of New Kent, is the guest of Mrs. Moore.

The death of Mrs. Monteiro, of Goodchill, has thrown gloom over the Church Hill community, where, as Miss Fannie Allen, she had been so popular and so beloved. Mrs. Monteiro was a niece of Mrs. M. E. Christian, and previous to her marriage made her home with the latter on east Broad.

Miss Susan G. Reed, of Grace street, has returned from a pleasant visit to Miss Sate Gregory, of Chesterfield. Misses Ethel and Bertha Dickinson have returned from Philadelphia, where they have been spending several months.

Mrs. Eugene Shepherson, of Harrison street, together with her son Rowley, is visiting friends in Rochester, and will return via Chicago.

Some of the bon-mots of Richard Brinsley Sheridan are as follows: The two royal dukes, meeting him, declared that they were discussing whether he were more fool or rogue and jocularly asked his own opinion. Bowing and taking each by an arm, he replied: "Why, I faith, I believe I am between both."

When somebody warned him that his excesses in liquor would destroy the "coat of his stomach," "well then," said he, "my stomach must just digest in its waistcoat."

Every one knows how Sheridan "went to the Jews." On being told once that the lost tribes of Israel had been found, he said he was glad to hear it, as he had nearly expected the other way.

Some one asked him, "Which performer did you like best in the piece?" The prompter, for I saw less and heard more of him than any one else."

In the course of the year we meet with a great many bright women; there is none brighter than Kate Field. She is in the best sense a superior woman, keen of intellect and large of heart.

What she has to say she says well, for she is a thinker; moreover, she has wit and humor of the best kinds, always timely and never harsh. She has never written or spoken a dull word. She is optimistic and sensible, and earnest and forceful, and the world is better for having her.

HITHER AND YONDER.

Weekly Chat Regarding People in General.

A writer gives this account of Mrs. Kendal's morning room or "den": "Bright sunshine, and the scent of mignonette greeted us as the door opened on a quaint, charming room, with a wonderful yellow paper and predominating tint of old gold and bronze green. On the walls were portraits of Madge Kendal's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Robertson. The doctrine of heredity is well supported in the irresistible twinkle of the eye, the sensitive nostrils and the keen intelligence of expression handed down from father to daughter, and the clever, kindly face of Tom Robertson seems to bid us welcome to the sanctum sanctorum of his youngest sister. The younger generation is represented by charming portraits of Mrs. Kendal's daughters, Margaret, Ethel and Dorothy. An excellent portrait of Mr. Kendal, by Sarny, completes the gallery. All the charming trifles which constitute the atmosphere of a feminine woman surround us on all sides. And, boon of all boons, when the double doors which divide this little territory from the rest of the house are closed, perfect stillness reigns. The bustle and roar of London might be miles distant. All is beauty and peace."

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt gave the first dinner of the season at her magnificent marble palace, at Newport, Wednesday night week. It excited more interest than any other event of the week.

Advices from England give encouraging reports from the sick room of Mrs. Alfred Paget, who has been ill for several weeks. Mrs. Paron Stevens, who is now with her daughter, having gone over a fortnight ago, will return just as soon as she thinks it possible to leave Mrs. Paget. Mrs. Stevens is needed at Newport, and the progress of the sick woman is noted with no little interest. It is quite possible that a sea voyage will be beneficial to Mrs. Paget, and that she will accompany her mother back to this country.

The season at Narragansett Pier began last Saturday with the opening of the Casino. Tennis is the principal attraction. Magnificent surf scenes by day and moonlight attract many visitors. Among those early on the grounds are Mrs. Jefferson Davis and Miss Winnie Davis, who arrived there last week for the season. Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, and a party of church dignitaries engaged rooms at the Warwick, and began a summer vacation Wednesday.

Asbury Park has its share of notables. Mrs. Hoadly, wife of ex-Governor Hoadly of Ohio, is at the Oriental, where she Hoadlys have a five suite of apartments in the tower overlooking the prettiest view of the ocean. Mrs. De Wolf Hopper alimony and dresses in the height of fashion. She has a face of a Southern type of beauty, is tall and dark. Just now she is not entertaining so much as she did. The news of De Wolf Hopper's third marriage caused her to keep to her room all day—and she has not been seen much since. It is reported that she will soon marry a well-known racing man.

Lady Pauncefoot, wife of the British Ambassador, was one of the guests at the first luncheon of the season at Newport, given by Mrs. George De Forest. The guests were twenty in number, and included Mrs. F. Vanderbilt. The table decorations were Jacqueminot roses and ferns for a centre piece, and loose roses strewn over the cloth.

There are three young women who will probably be introduced at Newport this season, in whom there is great interest. They are Miss Sybil Sherman, Miss Virginia Fair and Miss Elsie Clevs, all wealthy in their own right, with more in prospect, all nice looking girls, and all well educated and sensible. In the matter of money, Miss Fair, no doubt, takes the lead, having many millions, which she inherited from her mother.

Having the prospect of still more money from her father, she is dark and slender, somewhat petite, and altogether a very nice young woman. Mr. and Mrs. Oelrichs (the latter Miss Fair's sister) are occupying the Bancroft house, which they purchased at Newport two years ago. And there Miss Fair will be introduced. Miss Clevs will have a ball given for her at the big cottage of her father, Banker Clevs, and it will be an event long to be remembered. Miss Sherman is a cousin of the Countess of Craven. Her mother was a sister of ex-Governor Peabody Wetmore, and upon her death left Miss Sybil Sherman an immense fortune. Mr. Sherman's second wife, formerly Miss Brown, of Providence, is also very rich. There are certainly excellent chances for three men of title to carry off three rich and lovely girls, but they are all girls of good sense, it is possible that they will prefer American young men. When it was erroneously announced a few months ago that Miss Fair was to marry a certain nobleman who was visiting this country, Miss Fair was most indignant, and said the Americans were good enough for her.

His Highness, the Grand Duke Alexander, of Russia, cousin to His Imperial Majesty, the Czar of Russia, has returned to New York, on board the Russian flag-ship Dimitri Donskoi. Once more he will be the dined and wined, and will have a chance to meet a few more of the belles and matrons and beaux of that city. To do this, however, he will have to take a dozen or more trips to the Long Island places, the Tuxedo cottages, and a run up the Hudson now and then.

On Tuesday next General and Mrs. Butternut will entertain the Grand Duke at Luncheon at Cragside, their beautiful country establishment, at Cold Spring-on-the-Hudson, and something very fine may be expected. If it is half so elaborate as the one given to the Comte de Paris and the Duc d'Orleans and a party of a few years ago, it will open the eyes of even His Highness, the Duke.

Tuxedo Park is right dull at present, the recent gayeties, now that they are over, making it appear all the quieter by comparison. The tennis tourney was a great success, inasmuch as it brought life to the picturesque colony, and gave the cottagers a chance to entertain the members of the various house parties in a manner than by driving, riding, boating, or dancing at the clubhouse. With the end of the 4th of July gayeties, the season came to an end at the Park, and now there will be nothing doing until the autumn. Many of those who are at their cottages for the early summer leave about this period for Newport or other watering places, and do not get up again until the autumn. It is hoped that the coaching season at the park will be as successful as last year's, for it never fails to bring gayety to the place.

One house in Scotland is not enough for Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, and so they have taken a second one about two miles from Cluny Castle, their new abode. Craig-dhu-House, their new possession, is on the banks of Loch Ovie, and hard by the rocky recesses where Prince Charlie took refuge after the battle of Culloden. It is a most romantic spot, and Mr. Carnegie has long wished to rent it. With Cluny Castle and Craig-dhu-House, the Carnegies will be able to entertain considerable numbers, and as they are never so happy as when making others happy, they will be able to do that latter thing now to a degree that will make their own cup of contentedness overflow. Mr. Carnegie, who each season goes off with a party on an extended coaching trip, will this summer visit the valley of the Wye and the charming western counties of England. Mrs. Carnegie, who was so ill last winter, has now entirely recovered her health.

Richmond is emphatically a city of lodges and unions. The secret societies are innumerable, and this very fact attests the good work they are doing. Every good order has for its object the good both financially and physically of its members. Probably the order whose influence is most widely spread is the Masonic. The title "Ancient, Free and Accepted" describes it well. Other orders are growing and will soon push this order in point of numbers, but it will be some time before they can gain the prestige which long years have given to the Masons. These secret societies undoubtedly do great good. The cost of joining them is trifling, and when a member is sick he reaps great benefit from them. They give him sympathizing friends during his illness, and should it terminate fatally the man can die with the assurance that his brother members will look after those whom he leaves behind him.

The gains in the order of Odd-Fellows of the jurisdiction of Virginia this year will be the largest in the history of the order. Three months of the present Grand Lodge year have not as yet passed, and yet the increase is larger than that of last year. Last year the increase was a little over 400, while the increase for the first two months of the present year is in excess of that number. In Norfolk much activity is being displayed, and within the next week a new lodge of two hundred charter members will be instituted. District Deputy Grand Master David Carpenter, who has charge of Norfolk district, is at the head of this movement and will give at least 400 increase from that section during the year. New Lodges have been instituted at Franklin, Lawrenceville, Matthews Court-house, Claremont and Big Stone Gap during the last six weeks. The Odd-Fellows' Temple Association is getting in good shape and will soon call upon the lodges and members of the fraternity in the State to contribute to this proposed home of the order, which will be located in this city.

The question of having an office for the Grand Secretary is also attracting the attention of the Grand Lodge. At present there is no office for the Grand Secretary, and the records are kept in a carpenter shop, which is not the place for such valuable papers.

Over $3,000.00 are paid out annually for the relief of brothers in distress, sickness, burial and caring for the widows and orphans. In Virginia last year $24,000 was expended for this purpose.

West-End Lodge of Good Templars—a thriving, working body meeting at the Clay-Street Baptist Church—has had one or more initiations each meeting recently.

Unity Lodge, No. 86, I. O. O. F., in stalled and appointed the following officers Friday night, July 7th: Elective—N. G. D. S. Thompson, N. G. James M. Leidy; Recording Secretary, George L. Ball; Financial Secretary, W. W. Childress; Treasurer, G. W. Pockington; Chaplain, R. A. Roper. Appointed—C. W. Withard, warden; W. J. Osbourne, conductor; R. S. to N. G. J. J. Dayton.

port; L. S. to N. G. R. R. Rodgers; R. S. to V. G. J. R. Pockington; L. S. to V. G. W. J. Lawrence, outside guardian, J. A. Cardona; inside guardian, J. J. Fussell; R. S. S. C. D. Vollmer; L. S. S. E. C. Gill. After which refreshments were served in abundance.

The Times is indebted to Mr. Charles W. Harwood for a copy of the Royal Arcanum Guide for July. It is an exceedingly handsome number, and contains excellent pictures of the grand regents of the order in different States for the year 1893-94. Among them is a speaking likeness of Mr. Harwood. The Guide is full of items of interest to members of the order. The following are clippings from that journal:

Charles W. Harwood, grand regent of Virginia, was born in that State and served in the war in the famous Howitzer Battalion, and at its close moved with his family to New York, where he spent several years in mercantile pursuits, and was also for a time with the New York Central railroad. He was traveling agent for the Atlantic Gulf railway, and then with the Piedmont Air Line. He returned to Virginia in connection with the Richmond and Danville, and still holds the position of its soliciting agent.

Since an Arcanumite he has given much time to developing its fraternal features, having served in the chairs of McArthur Council of Richmond, and of entry to the Grand Council was elected sentry, then chaplain, vice regent, and this year regent. Being possessed of a store of humor and repartee, he is in great demand at meetings, his earnest, effective and at times eloquent words arousing laggard councilmen to a sense of duty. He is pushing with active endeavor the work left him to carry on by that noble leader and associate, Brother Irvine.

As a business man he is sought after, and his firm convictions as to duty and the promptness in all details has won for him the title of "Old Reliable"; as a companion or friend he is invaluable, and he possesses the entire confidence of his community.

In season and out of season members of the Royal Arcanum should work for the welfare of the order. Too many are like the tramp taking before the Justice, who asked if he had any trade. "Yes, your Honor; I shovel snow." "In winter," said his Honor, "but that's past; what do you do in the summer?" "I wait for the winter, your Honor."

The greatest amount of work in our order is done in the months immediately preceding our Grand Council sessions, and doubtless many will say it is for political preferment. Doubtless it is, and for the balance of the year these members will practically be in the same position as the tramp waiting for another Grand Council session and work for the three months previous.

There are thousands of good workers in our order, however, who never ask or push forward for any office, and to them the order owes a debt of gratitude, as winter or summer they keep on in the good work, encouraging the new and members of their councils to do likewise and filling up the gaps made by suspensions and death.

The right hand should always be extended and kind words of welcome given whenever we met a member of our grand organization. Don't hesitate to speak to an apparent stranger, for you may find him a friend and brother who may be of great assistance to you, especially if you are away from home.

At a regular meeting of Anchor Lodge, No. 8, Order of Golden Chain, held at Schiller Hall on Friday night last the following officers were installed by Deputy Supreme Commander, C. Y. Bargamin:

W. L. Richardson, commander; George E. Wilson, vice-commander; Thomas E. Taylor, assistant commander; William H. Wilkinson, past commander; William H. Barratt, prelate; Albert Witte, secretary; Oscar J. Adams, collector; C. Y. Bargamin, treasurer; R. E. Cox, guide; Charles Warren Rasland, guardian; P. G. A. Stecker, sentinel.

Chesterfield County. The Chesterfield Agricultural Society met yesterday morning in the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. It was decided to get out a book setting forth the various mineral and agricultural resources of Virginia, for general distribution at the World's Fair on Virginia day, August 9th, to be known as a hand-book of Chesterfield county. The edition will contain an excellent map of the county. The question as to whether the county would make their usual exhibit at the State Exposition in October was also discussed at length. No conclusion was arrived at, and the matter will not be settled until the next meeting of the society at Chesterfield Courthouse, the fourth Monday of this month.

The C. and O. Reduces Its World's Fair Rates From Virginia Points. The Chesapeake and Ohio railway announce that they will shortly place on sale limited World's Fair tickets to Chicago at the rate of one fare for the round-trip, to be sold on certain days, to be named hereafter. These tickets will be accepted only in day coaches, and holders will not be permitted to occupy sleeping coaches. The Chesapeake and Ohio will, however, provide their elegant new vestibule coaches, in which passengers holding such tickets can travel.
